Hello Coalinga High, Hello fellow classmates. I'd like to start off by thanking my Mom, my Dad, Grandma, Grandpa, Aunts, Uncles, Cousins, my old Friends, the people who were kind to me, the people who were not so kind to me, I'd also like to thank my sister St Therese, and most importantly, God.

When I took my first steps on the campus grounds, I did not appreciate the beauty of the older buildings. I was very nervous and fell into a depression, which faded over time. I know that you all know that I was a very quiet student who had very little to nothing to say, but I want you to know that I deeply appreciate the very few times people would tell me something kind, or when we had group projects, I was happy, feeling some attention deep inside. Thank you!

Saint Therese once said, "I wanted to find an elevator which would raise me to Jesus, for I am too small to climb the rough stairway of perfection." How many of us feel like the academic path feels too harsh or rough? Well, what if I told you that medals or great accomplishments aren't the biggest successes? The biggest success is found in the most overlooked little things we do, for example: helping out a fellow peer with his studies, or being merciful with yourself when you don't get something or fail, or simply smiling at someone with great love.

Now, as we prepare to lift off in our own ways into the world, I have something to say about the world. Many of us know how cruel the world out there can be, and I have always heard people justify it or brush it off by saying "that's how the real world works," but we do not realize that we have the power to change that cruel world. Picture this: a Mother with two children who barely make enough to pay the rent, and one day the owner threatens to kick them out into the streets for not being able to pay rent. You can make a difference by choosing to be merciful and not greedy, and let them stay and offer the Mother a better job, do the opposite of what the cruel world does, if you really want a better world.

My Submission

1. My introduction establishes my subject and situation and grabs my readers' attention.
2. I consistently use a first-person point of view.
3. I use dialogue, description, and reflection to describe a personal experience.
4. My word choice enhances or develops my voice.
5. I use a variety of transitions to create strong connections between and among ideas.
6. In my conclusion, I tell readers how the events ended and give them a new insight.

And now I know that not all of us have made it to graduation because some of us were lazy, or we made some very bad choices, but guess what, you are still important, you are more than letters and numbers on a piece of paper or a digital screen or your bad actions, you are not a failure.

For my Juniors to freshmen and newcomers, Be not afraid

Thank you!

Peace be with you all.
